What is a dream job?, by English Language Learner, Isabel Moreno

For some people a dream job is the one that lets them make a lot of money, for some others it is the one that lets them enjoy what they do, and for others it is the one where they find balance between money and enjoying what they like to do. For me, at this stage of my life, it is the balance between money and enjoying what I like to do.

Along my life I have had three different dream jobs. The first one was when I finished high school. At that moment my dream job was to be a psychologist, but unfortunately my parents didn't have enough money to pay for this career, and also I did not have any scholarship opportunities. My second dream job was born when I came to this country, and this was to become an immigration lawyer, and one more time the money was my obstacle, but it wasn't the only one, the time and the language were added to this. My third one, and the most reachable dream is to work for the school system supporting immigrant families by providing information and resources of better opportunities for their children. It is sad that a lot of children with great intellectual potential do not achieve their dreams due to the lack of information and support.

Maybe tomorrow my dream job will be different, but for now this is my dream job, and I'm going to do everything I can to try to reach it.

Write About Yourself, by English Language Learner, Karol Loyola

My name is Karol Loyola.
I am from Peru.
I came to America with my family for my husband's work.
I live in Nashville.
I study English in the morning two days a week with my teacher, Mark.
In the future, I want to be a lawyer, this is my big dream but the first I need to study and improve my English.
